“ Mom I’m going to miss you very much just like I miss dad. We didn’t always see eye to eye on a lot of things but I still loved you very much.Life isn’t going to be the same without you here I thought it changed when dad died but now both my parents are no longer here and it’s gonna be very difficult to go on knowing that I can’t hear your voice anymore either, but I’m glad you are no longer suffering or confused and thinking people thought you were nuts I felt so bad not being able to help you remember and not see the things you thought you were seeing and you couldn’t understand why we couldn’t see the things you were. I love You mom now and forever I will miss you

“ You did not just raise me; you saved me. When the world felt like it was shifting, you were my solid ground. You traded your quiet life for chaos, trading rest for responsibility, and gave me a childhood wrapped in love.

Watching you love my son is the greatest gift. You brought the same, soft, steady, and wide love to him that you gave me, acting as an anchor for both of us. He sees your strength, and I see the way his eyes light up when you enter the room.

Your hands, though perhaps weathered, were the softest place to land. You showed us what unconditional love looks like, teaching us resilience, kindness, and how to stay standing when things get hard. You are not just family; you are our home. Your lessons, your stories, and your warmth are ingrained in us. I will spend my life trying to honor the immense love you gave, ensuring the legacy you built continues for generations.

“ The thought of Linda not being here is something that is going to be so hard. She's always been a steady in my life. She is going to be missed by many. I just hope that she was happily reunited with my mom, grandma, sisters Barb and Janet, brothers Bud and Jim, and the love of her life, Sonny, aka Sonnyman. You will be in my heart forever Linda.

You & I didn't always get along the greatest but I know we always loved each other! You will forever be missed, especially when I look down to the end of the pew where we both sat! It's a little easier on me knowing that you were a Christian & are in Paradise with Sonny & all the saints that have gone on before!
