“ My bestest forever!!

So many things I want to say!

So many memories I want to share! So many years of friendship!

High school, our girls, those crazy nights,

Garfield and the fish tank, so many fiesta together! You saved me from my life, just by being you! I thank you for 30+ years of love and light my sister from another mister!! I will always be grateful and humbled for how we grew and what we accomplished!

So many lives will not be the same without you!

I Love you with all my heart, forever!! Gods speed to you, and your family! Always know we have megadoodle and bren's back!!

Fly high and free, you're finally unbound by the world!

PS you're gonna have to deal with being the center of attention for once 😊😄😇❤️

“ Best Friend

This heartbreak of losing one my best friend and the emptiness of these mere words to convey it is overwhelming. Molly hated to be the center of attention butWe met while working as nurses where being understaffed, overworked and short supplied was the norm. Molly knew how to turn a hellish shift into a funny memory. Molly slowly became more than just a friend, more than sisters. We shared each other's worst and best times. We carried each other through many battles and pushed for good times. Molly basically became my roommate through the years. We became each other's rocks when times were tough. Knowing Molly was a gift that these incompetent words cannot fulfill. When Molly loved, she did so like she did everything in her life, 200% and with all her heart. She was one of the most hardest workers I know. She loved helping her patients and they loved her for it. She loved her family, her Dad Mom brothers and sister. But her pride and joy was her daughter Meghan and then her grandson Bren. I am still in disbelief, denial and shock she is gone - that I can no longer go visit or call her. She always joked we would be nursing home roommates one day. I miss my friend and want her back. Thank you for being my friend all these years. I pray for your infinite joy and peace wherever you are now. I miss you so much Molly.

“ I have good memories of working at McAuley’s, celebrating our birthdays together and going to the Bare Naked Ladies concert, getting covered in Mac and cheese powder.... We laughed so hard we cried, and every where we went people were like what is that smell.... You and your friends teaching me Presidents and you know what’s, I was never any good at cards... Way to young.... Fly High Molly
Until we meet again!!!!
